

APPAN MENON MEMORIAL AWARD FOR 2010 - 2011

Appan Menon was a journalist who began as an agency reporter and worked in the print media and finally in television in its early years. Anchoring the popular weekly programme, The World This Week for NDTV he followed international news and reports an Indian perspective. Before joining NDTV, Appan had worked for the Hindu, Frontline, The Press Trust of India and United News of India. He had also spent some time covering the United Nations HQ for Inter Press Service. The Appan Menon Memorial Trust (AMMT) was established by his friends in 1996, soon after his untimely death on 28 June 1996.

■ The Trust proposes to award a grant of Rs 1 lakh every year to professional journalists working in the area of world affairs or development news with an Indian perspective. Journalists from any media with 3-5 years experience can apply by submitting the following.

- A brief proposal (1000 words) stating in brief the area, issues and your particular interest.
- A brief account of the proposed use of the grant and the time frame.
- Curriculum vitae and one letter of reference.
- Samples of recent work.

The selection of the proposal to be awarded for this year will be made by an eminent jury. The grant will be made in September 2010.

Applications should reach the address below by August 30, 2010
